

The Alleghenies Profile

The Alleghenies, a region located in Southcentral Pennsylvania, is an area of vibrant history and rich traditions that trace back hundreds of years to the first settlers in the region. Visitors to The Alleghenies will find an abundance of historical sites and landmarks dedicated to preserving the events and heritage of previous generations while presenting a wealth of opportunities to explore and learn about the region. The region is made up of seven counties: Bedford, Blair, Cambria, Centre, Fulton, Huntingdon and Somerset.

The history of the region is linked to coal, steel, railroads and agriculture. The region had numerous mines and huge steel mills during the peak periods of those industries. The coal and steel industry in the region declined sharply in the 1980s. Today, the region features a diverse mix of jobs in manufacturing, health care, service industries, retail and wholesale trade, tourism (this sector is growing with a variety of investments in lodging and attractions) and government.

Population: There are more than 600,000 people residing in the seven county region. The most populous city in the region is Altoona with a population of more than 46,000.

Location: The Alleghenies region is a two-hour drive from Pittsburgh, three-hours from Washington, DC, four-hours from Philadelphia and five-hours from New York City, with convenient access to the Pennsylvania Turnpike, I-70, I-80 and I-99.

Climate: The Alleghenies region experiences four distinct seasons with relatively cool summers and snow in the winters. The climate has been described as mountain-like.

Did You Know?

- Flight 93 National Memorial: Shanksville, Somerset County is home to the Flight 93 National Memorial. Currently there is a temporary memorial that honors the passengers and crew of Flight 93. The permanent memorial is slated for dedication in 2011.
- Quecreek Mine Rescue Memorial: In the same county as the Flight 93 tragedy, nine trapped miners were rescued in 2002. Today, the Quecreek Mine Rescue Memorial honors the rescue workers who saved the nine trapped miners. The site also features an arbor garden with bronzed statues of the rescued miners.
- Horseshoe Curve: During World War II, the German government sent saboteurs to the United States to destroy/sabotage 12 key industrial sites. The Horseshoe Curve and Gallitzin Tunnels were on their list. Fortunately, they were captured before they could carry out their mission.
- Johnstown Incline Plane: The incline is the world's steepest vehicular incline. Rising 900 feet from the valley below at a 71.9% grade, the incline cars carry passengers and automobiles up the mountain for a breathtaking view of the city below.
- Lincoln Highway: The first coast-to-coast highway travels right through the region including downtown McConnellsburg, originating in New York City and ending in San Francisco. The Lincoln Highway helped to start automobile tourism.
- Memorial Day: A Lutheran cemetery in Boalsburg was the birthplace of Decoration Day. Later the day became known as Memorial Day and in 1971, the federal government made it an official national holiday.
